

A Literary Afternoon

With

Jill Nelson, Daniel Coleman, and Roy McMurtry

1:00 p.m. Saturday, February 10th, 2018

East Plains United Church,
375 Plains Road East, Burlington ON

Jill Nelson is author of Tapes from California: Teenage Road Tripping, 1976, the story of her 6-month road trip hitchhiking through Canada, Washington, Oregon and California. Jill is the co-author and author of John Holmes: A Life Measured in Inches (2008), and Golden Goddesses: 25 Legendary Women of Classic Erotic Cinema, 1968-1985 (2012).

Daniel Coleman was born of Canadian missionary parents and raised in Ethiopia, an experience he has written about in The Scent of Eucalyptus: A Missionary Childhood in Ethiopia. He returned to complete a PhD in Canadian Literature at the University of Alberta in 1995. He currently teaches at McMaster University where he has recently founded the Centre for Community Engaged Narrative Arts. His new book, Yardwork: A Biography of an Urban Place, is a meditation on the layers of ecological, cultural and political stories that make up Hamilton. It was nominated in 2017 for the prestigious RBC Taylor Prize.

Roy McMurtry has had a remarkable life and an influential career in Canada. He began as "the Kid" on the Varsity Blues football team and became "the Chief" at Osgoode Hall, Attorney General of Ontario, High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, and Chief Justice of Ontario. He has made an enduring contribution to Canadian law and politics. His new book, Memoirs and Reflections, reveals the man behind the law practice, the work on public commissions, and reflects on family, sport, and art. This important memoir tells the story of a generous life in public service and is a portrait of a humane, humorous, optimistic, and always decent man.
